Port Of Tacoma Dedicates New World Trade Center

OFFICIAL OPENING: The Port of Tacoma World Trade Center was officially opened by (left to right): Doug Sutherland, mayor of Tacoma; Robert Falcey, administrator, World Trade Institute; Jack Fabulich, Port of Tacoma commissioner; Jack Helton, vice-president, Sea-Land Service, Inc., Alaska division; Booth Gardner, governor of Washington State, and Larry Killeen, executive director of the Port of Tacoma.

In special cermonies and the Port, which has dedicating the first phase of the $15 million Port of Tacoma World Trade Center, Washington State Governor Booth Gardner cited the role this facility will play in economic growth and trade development. The Governor stated, "We can't sit casually by and expect the business opportunity to come to us. We're in a new era. We're going to be competitive, and what you're doing here in the Trade Center and in the ports is just one part of a very important equation from which all of us are going to benefit in the long-term."

The Trade Center, which is located just off Interstate 5 on Port of Tacoma road, features 61,000 square feet of leasable space in the first-phase, five-story, tower. Major tenants include Sea-Land, which will occupy 21,000 feet of office space, 3,000 feet on the main floor which it will use for Commission meetings and other general business purposes.

With the April 5th dedication of the new facility, the Port of Tacoma joined a network of 37 other such Centers located throughout the world. Seventeen more are under construction, and 25 others are in the planning stages. Over 50,000 individuals are affiliated with the World Trade Centers Association network.

The Center, which occupies 6.3 acres of Port land, is leased to the World Trade Center Group, consisting of McGranahan, Messenger Associates, the Merit Company, and Riley-Griffin, who is the leasing agent for the facility. The second phase will be an eight-story structure, offering 99,000 square feet of gross leasable space.

The trend of the Port working with private developers will continue in the future. According to Larry Killeen, executive director at the Port of Tacoma, "With the marriage of Port ground leases and private sector dollars, we can make positive things happen on the tideflats." Other parcels of Port land are also designated for development through similar co-ventures with the private sector. Killen added, "We feel this is the best way to stimulate the regional economy and provide the citizens of Pierce County with the best return on their revenues which help support the Port."

The World Trade Centers Association is a non-political, non-profit group which was founded in 1968. Its goals include the expansion of world trade, and the promotion of international business relationships,

Official Defends Budget

"HUD is assisting more people today than ever before with more tightly-targeted and stable budget outlays," says William Y. Nishimura of the U.S. Department Housing and Urban Development. In an April 19 speech to the Puget Sound Chapter of the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials (NAHRO) at Longacres, the HUD Regional Administrator-Regional Housing Commissioner explained the Reagan Administration's budget plans for his Department.

"The number of low-income households subsidized by HUD nationwide will continue increasing by 207,000 through Fiscal Year 1987," said Nishimura. This contrasts with what critics of the proposed moratorium on new housing HUD will continue to assist more than 4 million households nationwide, while reducing cash outlays to help bring the Federal deficit down. In Washington populations of Everett and Belligham - are currently served by HUD's various housing assistance programs.

"Most importantly," said Nishimura, "not a single tenant we presently serve will lose thier housing resource!" He called on NAHRO Officials to help assure tenants of that fact.

Nishimura also told NAHRO Officials about some of HUD's new initiatives: A proposed permanent housing voucher program, youth training and employment opportunities, and the use of existing HUD programs to help local agencies house homeless families and individuals.

Lower budgets and new initiatives reflect a change in HUD's approach. "Fundamental to this change is the HUD focus on assisting people rather than places," said Nishimura. "Our mission is vital to those with the greatest needs in our society."

BONN, West Germany.

The Reagan administration halted all U.S. trade with lefist Nicaragua, contending that its "aggressive actions" were "incompatible with normal commercial relations.

In an order signed by President Reagan, Nicaraguan airliners and flagg vessels were denied access to the United States and a 27 year old U.S. Nicaraguan friendship treaty was abrogated.

"The President authorized these steps in response to the emergency situation created by the Nicaraguan government aggresive action in Central American.

Nicaragua's trade with the U.S. has declined sharply since 1981, reflecting the deterioration in relations between the two countries.

In addition to the economic sanctions, Reagan also suspended a 1958 U.S.Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Navigation.

However Reagan will still press Congress to provide for the Contra guerrillas battling the Nicaraguan government

PSALM 119

Blessed are the undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the LORD.

Blessed are they that keep his testimonies, and that seek him with the whole heart.

They also do no iniquity: they walk in his ways.

Thou hast commanded us to keep thy precepts diligently.

O that my ways were directed to keep thy statutes!

Then shall I not be ashamed, when I have respect unto al thy commandments.

I will praise thee with uprightness of heart, when I shall have learned thy righteous judgments.

I will keep thy statutes: O forsake me not utterly.

Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy word.

With my whole heart have I sought thee: O let me not wander from thy commandments.

Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee.

Blessed art thou, O LORD teach me thy statutes.

With my lips have I declared all the judgments of thy mouth.

I have rejoiced in the way of thy testimonies, as much as in all riches.

I will meditate in thy precepts, and have respect unto thy ways.

I will delight myself in thy statutes: I will not forget thy word.

Deal bountifully with thy servant, that I may live, and keep thy word.

Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law.

I am a stranger in the earth: hide not thy commandments from me.

My soul breaketh for the longing that it hath unto thy judgments at all times.

Thou hast rebuked the proud that are cursed, which do err from thy commandments.

Remove from me reproach and contempt; for I have kept thy testimonies.

Princes also did sit and speak against me: but thy servant did meditate in thy statutes.

Thy testimonies also are my delight and my counsellors.

My soul cleaveth unto the dust: quicken thou me according to thy word.

I have declared my ways, and thou heardest me: teach me thy statutes.

Make me to understand the way of thy precepts: so shall I talk of thy wondrous works.

My soul melteth for heaviness: strengthen thou me according unto thy word.

Remove from me the way of lying: and grant me thy law graciously.

I have chosen the way of truth: thy judgments have I laid before me.

I have stuck unto thy testimonies: O LORD, put me not to shame.

I will run the way of thy commandments, when thou shalt enlarge my heart.

Teach me, O LORD, the way of thy statutes; and I shall keep it unto the end.

Give me understanding, and I shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe it with my whole heart.

Make me to go in the path of thy commandments; for therein do I delight.

Incline my heart unto thy testimonies, and not to covetousness.

Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity; and quicken thou me in thy way.

Stablish thy word unto thy servant, who is devoted to thy fear.

Turn away my reproach which I fear: for thy judgments are good.

Behold, I have longed after thy precepts: quicken me in thy righteousness.

"The Doctors Prescription

Mercy Of God

What a man believes is revealed less clearly by the creeds he recites than by the unspoken premises upon which he usually acts. But the affirmation of another life beyond death has always been a central feature of Christian faith. It is so close to the core of Christ's teaching, it cannot be quietly abandoned without implying the whole Gospel is a fraud.

One reason many modern Chritians shy away from hard thinking about this particular article of their professed creed is that the concept of life after death is inextricably tied up with the idea of judgment. The classical teaching of the church, supported by the Scriptures, is that after death, each person is judged on the basis of how he has lived and than is consigned either to eternal joy in heaven or eternal suffering in hell. But the traditional teaching remains a stumbling block for millions of people who cannot reconcil the idea of eternal punishment with what Jesus taught - and what they themselves may have experienced - of the infinite goodness and mercy of God.

Modern orthodoxy dwells on the idea that the sorrow of hell stem from a belated recognition that one has willfully separated himself perpetually from the presence of God But this kind of suffering could be far worse than mere physical roasting, so the problem remains. How could a merciful God permit it to continue eternally? For the puzzled modern Christian, the way out of this dilemna may lie along these lines: let us make our daily moral decisions in a wholesome fear of the justice that God may hereafter mete out to the heedless and disobedient. But let us face death - our own or that of anyone else - with an unconquerable confidence that St. Paul was right when he said that nothing - "neither life nor death, things present nor things to come" - can separate us from the love of God.

Tacoma, Washington -- "Nursing Care Makes The Difference" is the message behind National Nurses Day, Monday, May 6, 1985. The Pierce County Nurses Assoiciation joins the American Nurses Association (ANA) and our nation's 1.7 million registered nurses in marking this event.

ANA President Eunice Cole, R.N., targets competition in health care and the availability and affordability of health care services as critical national issues. "On National Nurses Day, we rededicate ourselves to providing quality nursing care services to the public at prices that they can afford."

National Nurses Day give consumers a chance to remember registered nurses whose care has made a difference in their lives and the lives of their families

GENESIS 1

IN the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.

And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And the evening and the morning were the first day.

And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament: and it was so.

And God called the firmament HEAVEN. and the evening and the morning were the second day.

And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.

And God called the dry land EARTH; and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saaw that it was good.

And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

President Jackson's First Term

In his first term as President of Black America, Jesse Jackson is expanding his political base and developing civil rights as a tool.

He has used the distressing circumstances of Black Americans and a monochromatic civil rights pitch that he inappropriately called a "rainbow coalition" to gain the notice of White people. He now embraces causes that he terms "universal."

All causes, that is, that keep the spotlight on him. Nicaragua, South Africa, drugs in school, farmers' bankruptcies -- you name it.

Don't get me wrong, some of these issues, arguably all of them, need addressing. Drugs and South Africa are high on my list of problem -- priorities. And Jackson is performing a noteworthy purpose by staging events for the media to focus on them.

But when you put all of his energies together, there is no confluence of purpose on issues. It is simply energy for publicity's sake. And, again, I must put that into perspective by admitting that there is a place in any society for celebrities.

However, in Chicago, the Country Preacher did take time out to become serious. He lobbied against a very fat contract going to a White firm for construction at O'Hare Airport.

According to press reports, Jackson's reason for holding back millions of dollars from this company is due to its business activities in South Africa. One columnist thought that Jackson's brother, who bid for the same work and does not own a business in South Africa, might be favored over the White folks because of Jackson's "civil rights" activities.

As a matter of fact, we may be witnessing the writing of a new chapter in "civil rights."

But little matters like contracts at airports mean little to those excited and mesmerized by the rhetoric of Jackson's movement. Not that there is not a place for rhetoric either.

African-Americans come out of an oral tradition and we demand of our leaders a rhetorical approach to problem solving (which may be one reason we don't accomplish more) and communal posturing to some extent.

What is devastating, however, is that Jackson has elected himself President of Black America by asking Blacks to vote against Ronald Reagan and, when convenient, Whites in the Democratic Party. It worked, of course, because Blacks don't trust either. But Jackson's real aspirations were never spelled out and never really challenged.

Many simply felt good because they could vote for a Black to such a high office. The San Francisco Disaster, otherwise known as The Democratic National Convention, was the rude awakening to the feel-good follies of 1984 politics.

Now, less than a year later, Walter Mondale, who benefited most -- next to Jackson -- from Jackson's campaign, has named Jackson as a political liability to his failed candidacy and the Democratic Party.

But that criticism of a man who takes his political aspirations seriously and places his party loyalty above all others misses the point that Jackson gave all for his party.

Join Fight To Save Life Support Programs.

With hardly a week passing without new revelations of some industrial giant's failure to pay income taxes, and with even the inner circle of the Reagan administration admitting that the huge federal deficit will result in dire consequences if not substantially reduced, one would expect that closing a least some of the loopholes through which the rich escape would constitute an important aspect of any tax measure on which the administration is working.

Sadly, such is not the case.

Instead, tax measures designed to further burden those least able to pay are being debated and will become part of the tax "reform" package, unless you and I and other concerned Americans raise our voices in protest. Here is what I am talking about.

In 1945, Congress adopted a national policy to promote vital life support programs for millions of American families by exempting certain employee health and welfare benefits provided a safety net against economic disaster, and that their very existence---primarily the result of labor union negotiations---relieved the federal government of the necessity to creat and finance similar programs.

Now, in keeping with the Reagan spirit of what's profitable for big business is "fair" for everybody else, these new proposals would:

. tax 100% of unemployed benefits despite the economic vulnerability of our unemployed,

. tax workers' compensation benefits that were created to help those injured on the job,

. tax hospital, surgical, doctor, dental, eyeglass and other health-care protections,

. tax employees for employer contributions for education oportunities that have allowed minorities and women to upgrade their skills.

. tax employees for employer contributions for life insurance coverage,

. tax employees for participation in prepaid legal service programs designed to provide inexpensive legal assistance to those who otherwise would be without.

If passed, these measures would interfere in labor-management relations in an extremely devastating manner, and would probably destroy health and welfare programs that have taken years to establish. In the long run, the passage of such measures might increase the deficit, as the government would be pressured to substitute for the programs its meddling had destroyed.

More importantly, however, passage of these tax measures would leave millions of Americans without vital health and welfare coverage. 1983 statistics indicate that 75% of tose with pension coverage and almost 80% of the workers covered by health plans earn less thant $25,000 per year.

I will soon introduce a resolution in the House of Representatives to make it clear to the Reagan administration and the Reagan-controlled Senate that the House of Representatives will not stand for this attack on millions who count on us to insure that the government is just and rational, and who rely on us to reduce the deficit in a manner that will increase, not threaten, the welfare of all.

I am hopeful that my colleagues in the House will support such a resolution. I urge you, the readers of this column, to write your United States Representative urging support for this resolution when it appears.

We cannot permit the life support programs conceived in 1945 to be killed in 1985.

Unemployment Still Top Issue

It is dangerous for the nation to think that the current economic prosperity means there's no unemployment problem any more. In fact, unemployment is a serious problem that could grow to more than that at the first of a cyclical downturn.

And for Black Americans, whose unemployment rate is stuck at the 16 percent level, doing something about Depression-level unemployment rates is the top priority.

Unfortunately, most Americans wouldn't agree.

They know that overall unemployment is down to the seven percent range, and they are told that seven percent represents "normal" unemployment. There's a dim recognition that minority joblessness is a bit higher, and that some manufacturing regions have high unemployment. But that's about the extent of the general public's perception.

But seven percent isn't "normal." Just a decade or so ago it would have been seen as recession-level unemployment and "normal" was more properly defined at about four percent of the workforce.

Seven percent unemployment translates into about eight million people officially unemployed -- and almost as many "unofficially" jobless, since they are willing and able to work but can't find full-time jobs. Blacks are disproportionately among those who are jobless, with rates well over double the white jobless rate.

In considering the unemployment issue, it is important to understand that while the economy is creating an astounding 300,000 jobs every month it is not creating enough jobs to employ all who want to work.

And many of those jobs aren't full-time -- they're part-time jobs. The government counts all part-time work, even an hour a week, as a job. So the statistics mask what would otherwise be seen as a serious problem.

Some twenty percent of all U.S. jobs are part-time, and that share of all jobs is rising. Most part-time workers want to work part-time, but some six million do not -- they want to work full-time and accept part-time work because they have no other alternative.

Wages for part-time work are generally lower, and most such positions offer no fringe benefits. In Europe, where part-time work is also very extensive, the lack of fringes isn't as important since there is a fully-developed government social welfare net that includes family allowances, medical care insurance and housing subsidies.

But in the U.S. where social benefits are limited, there is no such compensation for part-time workers. So increasingly, workers are forced into the bottom tier of a two-tier job market. The more fortunate and skilled enjoy full-time jobs and benefits, and an increasing number are consigned to part-time, low-skill, no-benefit jobs.

That bottom tier of the job market is also home to the bulk of black workers, who are disporportionately found among low-wage occupations, in involuntary part-time positions, and in troubled industries being hit by import competition.

And despite the booming economy, factroy employment still lags and Americans are losing traditional opportunities for low and moderate-skill jobs in industry.

Rather than simply assuming there's no unemployment problem, then, it makes more sense to confront the facts and design an approach to creating true full employment -- with fulltime opportunities for people who traditionally suffer high unemployment, and for those displaced by the permanent downturn in manufacturing.

BUDGET PROMISE --AND PERIL

by Senator Bob Dole (R-KS)

Like "the Perils of Pauline" before the talkies came along, our Government's budget process has been marked with near-disasters. Surely our heroine cannot escape yet again. But escape she has; and we can dare to hope that good will triumph.

Against considerable odds, President Reagan and the Senate Republican Leadership have agreed on a compromise budget for Fiscal Year 1986. That budget takes direct aim at the horrendous deficit our Government has accrued: more than $212 billion in 1985. That deficit alone represents 5.5% of our GNP, and Federal outlays are running 24.5% of it.

That is not a formula for a sound economy. It is a prescription for soaring interest rates and more taxes in the short run and, over the long run, for economic collapse.

But by working with the President, Congress can both avert disaster and continue the vigorous economic expansion that is making life better for all Americans. If we seize this opportunity, we will secure a new era of prosperity for our people.

Keeping Faith

Thus far, we have chalked a Republican budget, but I hope it will become a bipartisan one. It addresses the widespread belief that our Government has become incapable of handling the Nation's finances. Let's face it: our fiscal irresponsibility has become a comic cliche. Our repeated inability to get spending under control has created cynicism in the electorate and, sometimes, in the Congress itself.

We must restore the public's faith in our capacity to act with both responsibility and vision. There is no better way than by showing the American people that their Senate has outgrown the tax-and-spend games of yesterday.

Let's be clear about what we are not doing. Our budget does not cut the current level of Federal spending, just the rate of growth. It provides for 2.1% growth in FY 86 and larger growth thereafter. At the same time, it is not just a freeze; it terminates some programs that have seen better days, and increases others--like Supplemental Security Income--that aid the truly needy. After all, not all programs are created equal.

Getting this budget enacted will not be easy. On the Senate floor, we'll face a lot of amendments with a single purpose: to feed the Federal spending machine with higher taxes, more debt, or less national security. These proposals are bad policy and, I believe, bad politics. We've already agreed to restrain defense spending by cutting in half the increases originally proposed. And we've raised revenue time and again, when we could do so without derailing economic recovery. But now we're asking our colleagues to join us in an historic effort to tackle some spending abuses that have gone untouched for too long. We reject the Rube Goldberg alternative of quick fixes, imaginary savings and all too real tax hikes.

What the People Have at Stake

This isn't just an exercise with numbers on a scorecard--moving a billion from one column to another until we hit the most popular budget formula. Our budget work rests on the human realities of people trying to make a living, to make ends meet, to plan for their children's futures and for their own old age.

So as we look ahead to the difficult weeks it will take to reach final agreement on a Federal budget for FY 86, let's keep in mind what's really at stake. We aren't subjecting ourselves to intense political heat for the fun of it. We aren't proposing program reductions because we like dealing with angry lobbyists. We're doing this to steer our country away from economic disaster. We're doing it because the budget deficit threatens the spectacular recovery that has, in just two years, created new jobs for millions, put the lid on inflation, given families the incentive to save again, and brought hope back to our people.

Leadership doesn't mean having all the answers. It means asking the right questions. And the budget we've worked out with President Reagan does ask the Congress precisely what it needs to confront. Perhaps the American people can help their elected representatives come up with the answers.

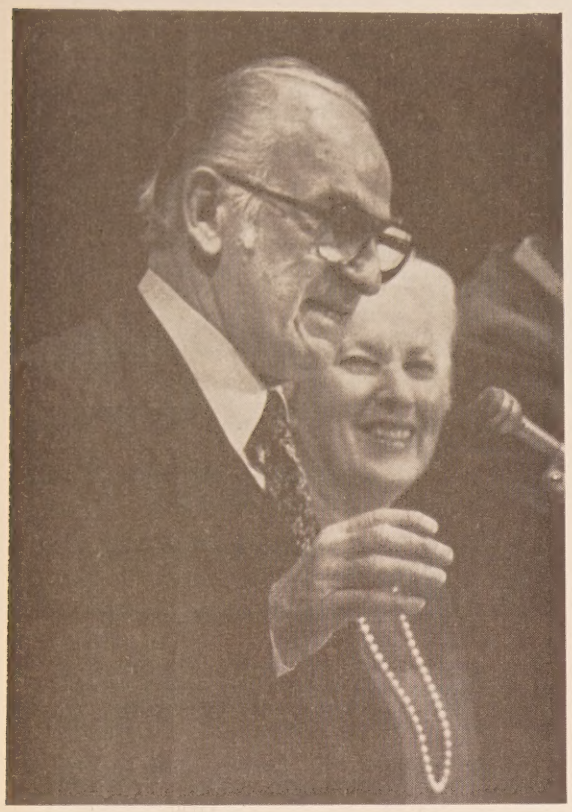
Lieutenant Governor Honored For Years Of Dedication



(OLYMPIA) All too infrequently, legends are acknowledged during their lifetime. But, a living legend was recognized on the Washington State Senate floor for his years of service to the people, and in anticipation of his continuing tenure as the state's second most important government official.

The gracious, steadfast John A. Cherberg, Lieutenant Governor of the State of Washington and his wife Betty, were honored for his years of service to the people, with the introduction of a Senate Resolution naming the state Public Lands building the John A. Cherberg Building.

It is a fitting tribute to the man who has held the second highest government office in the state for 28 years.

Cherberg was first elected to the post in 1956, and has held that position since, being elected to eitht four year terms. During this time he has served more than four years as acting governor in the absence of five governors. (Governors Rosellini, Evans, Ray, Spellman and Gardner).

In his 1984 reelection, Cherberg rceived more than a million votes, more than any man in the history of the state

Emotion-choked members, one by one, slauted the Lieutenant Governor, who is the presiding officer of the Senate, citing his elegance, grace and fairness.

"It's hard to really say how much you mean to all of us, because I cannot speak as eloquently as you," Senator Jim McDermott told Cherberg. "But it is important that we, the people of Washington, acknowledge the service you have provided the people of the state."

Senator A.L. "Slim" Rasmussen, who is serving his 17th session in the Senate and, perhaps, knows Cherberg better than most, said the resolution is fine, "but it doesn't say half enough. Thanks for agreeing to let us do this for you as an expression of appreciatior for all the years of service you have given the state."

Senator George Fleming told Cherberg "you have smoothed the road for me" in his climb, as the first-ever Black in the Washington State Senate, to the position of Senate Democratic Caucus Chairman. "Thank you for your patience, courteousy and advise."

Senator Eleanor Lee, a Republican who was defeated by Cherberg in last year's Lt. Governor election, called Cherberg "a living legend we can all point to with pride."

Another minority Republican Senator, Sam Guess, who is serving his 17th session, said Cherberg has "as even a hand, and as even a temper" as anyone he has seen in 25 years that he has been involved with the legislature, as an observer and as a Senator.

A moved , yet wry Cherberg, said he was completely overwhelmed byt the action and the tributes that followed on the Senate floor.

"I had understood that when you decided to this that I would be absent," Cherberg chided. "I've been jobbed!"

New York Bar Association Honor Apartheid Critic.

Arthur Chaskalson, founder and director of the Legal Resources Center, South Africa's first public interest law office, recently received an honorary membership in the Association of the Bar of the city of New York. Chaskalson, who is not an Afrikaaner, but is Jewish, is also chairman of the Johannesburg Bar Council.

Begun in 1979, the Legal Resources Center receives support from the Ford Foundation, the Carnegie Corporation of New York and the Rockefeller Brothers Fund. Harry F. Oppenheimer, the South African diamond and mineral industrialist, also gives financial support to the legal organization.

The center is modeled after the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. The Legal Resource Center's role in winning celebrated test cases has resulted in the extension of residential rights to wives and children of men legally qualified to be in urban areas, the redefinition of continuous employment so that a larger number of Blacks will gain permanent residential rights, the reversal of bus fare increased in Black townships, the defense of domestic workers dismissed without proper notice and the assistance of individuals victimized because of their trade union association.

Arthur Chaskalson's legal career has always been concerned with civil rights work. In the early sixties, he participated in the legal defense of Nelson Mandela, the imprisoned leader of the African National Congress.

In electing him to the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, Barrington D. Parker, Jr., the New York attorney who proposed Chaskalson for the honor, said that as "Director of the Legal Resource Center in Johannesburg he has commitment to the goals embodied by the Legal Resource Center and his distinguished practice as a civil rights barrister are consistent with the goals and purposes of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York."
